

Bankrate.com is a consumer personal finance website that garners 50 million page views per month!

How do we do that? Our award-winning team of editors and reporters is always thinking of the consumer. What does Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke's speech mean to a retired couple living on Social Security or a single mom looking for a job? We explain. And, all our content is produced in-house with all original reporting.

At Bankrate, our goal is to educate people on all aspects of their finances. Our readers rely on us to explain complex ideas in easy-to-understand language.

Come join us.

Bankrate editors and beats

- Holden Lewis | hlewis@bankrate.com
Editor for: mortgages, real estate, home equity beats
- Steve Pounds | spounds@bankrate.com
Editor for: banking, autos, checking, saving, CDs beats
- Doug Whiteman | doug.whiteman@bankrate.com
Editor for: insurance, debt beats
- Barbara Whelehan | bwhelehan@bankrate.com
Editor for: retirement, investing, taxes beats
- Jessica Patel | jpatel@bankrate.com
Editor for: college, celeb, frugal beats

Job opportunities:

- Currently seeking a full-time editor to manage the credit card beat in the New York office.
- Always looking for freelance writers and freelance editors.

To send a freelance query, email the editor responsible for the beat you are pitching. Please put "Story Idea" in the subject line.

2011 SABEW: Best blog

NAREE: Best blog

SABEW: Best blog

Award-winning editorial content

SPJ Sigma Delta Chi: Breaking news

SABEW: Best in Business among real-time publications

2012 SABEW: Feature:

Financial reform: one year later

NAREE: Best column

2011 SABEW: Package
explaining financial reform

NAREE: Best blog

SPJ Sigma Delta Chi: Deadline reporting

Bankrate's content is used by the premier real estate and finance sites on the Web

CNN Money.com

YAHOO! FINANCE

The New York Times
ON THE WEB

MarketWatch
From DOW JONES

WSJ.com THE WALL STREET JOURNAL ONLINE

Bloomberg

NASDAQ